

Gary B. and the Right to Literacy 65 Years After Brown

This panel examines the historic implications of the Gary B v. Whitmer case, which affirmed a constitutional right to literacy under the U.S. Constitution. A panel of legal experts on the right to education will explore the origins of the case, the broader impact of this decision, and its greater meaning for education policy and communities demanding quality public education.

Date: Wednesday, June 17th

Time: 4PM EST

Registration Link: <https://bit.ly/GaryB-Webinar>

Panelists:

Derek Black, University of South Carolina

Jitu Brown, Journey for Justice Alliance

Kimberly Robinson, University of Virginia

Kristine Bowman, Michigan State University

Moderator:

Erin Einhorn, reporter, NBC News

Hosted by Kevin Welner, National Education Policy Center and Jon Hale, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

